Advanced Training Program for Young Diplomatic Talents from Belt and Road Countries

Organizer

The program is sponsored by Shanghai Municipal Education Commission and is organized by School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA), Fudan University.

Introduction

The program is an initiative of the Shanghai Municipal Government to promote mutual understanding between young diplomats from Belt and Road countries. With a theme of “Consensus, Common Prosperity and Sharing”, Advanced Training Program for Young Diplomatic Talents from Belt and Road Countries aims to build a platform for young diplomats from Belt and Road countries to learn together and discuss issues about China’s global roles and the future of global governance. The program will introduce political, economic, social, cultural and ecological developments in China, analyze China's new diplomatic perspectives and policies, discuss Belt and Road Initiative and regional cooperation and governance reforms. It is expected that the young diplomats in the program will be able to better understand the China’s diplomatic values, policies and directions as well as those of other Belt and Road countries.

Curriculum

The curriculum comprises lectures with a variety of topics including Reform and Development of China’s Political System, China’s Economic Transformation,

Development and Innovation-driven Strategy, Modernization of China’s Social

Governance System, Inheritance and Modernization of the Chinese Culture, China's New Diplomatic Strategy, Regional Cooperation and Mutual Development of Belt and Road countries, National Conditions of Belt and Road countries. Seminars, group discussions and field trips will be organized. Leading experts, senior diplomats and practical specialists will be invited to the program.

The working language of the program is English.
